A hand-drawn diagram of a cell on lined paper. The cell is roughly rectangular with a thick outer boundary labeled 'cell wall' and a thinner inner boundary labeled 'cell membrane'. Inside the cell, there is a large, dark, oval-shaped structure labeled 'nucleus' and a lighter, irregularly shaped area labeled 'cytoplasm'.

A series of 10 small line drawings arranged horizontally, illustrating the stroke order for writing the letter 'r'. The first drawing shows a single vertical line. The second drawing shows a small curve at the top of the vertical line. The third drawing shows a small curve at the bottom of the vertical line. The fourth drawing shows a small curve at the top and bottom of the vertical line. The fifth drawing shows a small curve at the top and bottom of the vertical line, with a small curve at the top of the vertical line. The sixth drawing shows a small curve at the top and bottom of the vertical line, with a small curve at the top of the vertical line. The seventh drawing shows a small curve at the top and bottom of the vertical line, with a small curve at the top of the vertical line. The eighth drawing shows a small curve at the top and bottom of the vertical line, with a small curve at the top of the vertical line. The ninth drawing shows a small curve at the top and bottom of the vertical line, with a small curve at the top of the vertical line. The tenth drawing shows a small curve at the top and bottom of the vertical line, with a small curve at the top of the vertical line.
